5.1 By default, the fee will be calculated on the basis of the number of hours worked, rounded off in units of 5 minutes, multiplied by the hourly rate to be determined annually by Uittenbogaart Advocatuur. In addition, in many cases costs will have to be advanced, such as bailiffs fees, court fees, testimony fees, extracts from registers and the like. These costs are borne by the client. An advance declaration and / or an interim declaration will be sent periodically. The payment term for declarations is 7 days. The first meeting is free of charge.

5.2 If a so-called "min / max rate" has been agreed, a agreed minus hourly rate or an agreed max-hourly rate will be applied on the basis of a predefined result. If the predefined result is not achieved, the min-hourly rate will be calculated. Also during the term of the procedure, each time on the basis of the min-hourly rate will be settled as long as no result is known yet.

5.3 If the predefined result is achieved, the agreed max-hourly rate will be calculated. This is done by means of subsequent calculation to the max-hourly rate over the total number of hours worked. This also applies in the event of a possible action (such as the counterparty) such as an appeal.

5.4 If the outcome changes at a later stage, such as in the event of annulment of the judgment in first instance on appeal, this will not affect the max-hourly rate owed on the procedure in the previous instance and no reimbursement will be made.

5.5 If the client chooses to also be assisted by Uittenbogaart Advocatuur in such a case (for example in appeal or cassation), this can be done again on the basis of agreed result-dependent rates, or a fixed hourly rate or a fixed fee (fixed price for the entire procedure).

5.6 If the procedure in a later instance still has a positive outcome, post-calculation takes place to the max-hourly rate for all hours spent in the case in all instances, including the hours spent in previous instances.

5.7 If the predefined result is achieved, a maximum applies that is equal to the financial interest of the case. For the calculation of the financial interest of a case, the claim and any counterclaim are added together. If the importance of the case is not financially determinable, no maximum applies.

5.8 If the case takes an unexpected turn and has a different outcome than the predefined result, the extent to which the relevant outcome was desired by the client and / or favorable will be separately assessed. On this basis, a subsequent calculation will or will not take place to the max-hourly rate. In case of doubt, a retrospective calculation can also be made to the average between the agreed max-hourly rate and min-hourly rate.

5.9 If the agreement between Uittenbogaart Advocatuur and the client is terminated during the procedure, for whatever reason, a subsequent calculation will take place and will be settled on the basis of the max-hourly rate.

5.10 Rates can be adjusted each time on 1 January of the following year.
